

Effie Booker Dennison

Board Director

Effie Dennison is Executive Vice President, Director of Community Development and Corporate Social Responsibility for Texas Capital Bank across all Texas markets. In this capacity, Dennison oversees the banks' long-term strategic investments in local communities through philanthropic giving, employee engagement and community revitalization in urban areas. Dennison is also President of Texas Capital Community Development Corporation (TCCDC), a wholly owned subsidiary of the bank that provides commercial loans for mixed-use developments and equity investments in small business and real estate lending consortia. Dennison's previous roles included senior director for Fannie Mae North Texas Region and senior vice president of Wells Fargo Bank in Houston.

Dennison has a long exceptional history of giving back in her community and has served on numerous nonprofit boards, leading fundraising efforts and capital campaigns. She currently serves on the boards of Texas Women's Foundation, Parkland Foundation and Dallas Black Chamber Center for Excellence. She is a member of the Executive Women of Dallas, Genesis Women's Shelter Domestic Violence Alliance Board, The Dallas Summit and the Links Incorporated, Dallas Chapter.

She has been recognized for her outstanding leadership and work in the community and most recently the recipient of The Kemiah Haynes-Hawthorne Servanthood Award presented at the 2018 Epitome Awards Celebration. She is past recipient of the Dallas Women's Foundation "Women Helping Women" Maura Award; the Women's Symposium at Southern Methodist University Profiles in Leadership Award; Texas Executive Women, Women On The Move Award.

Dennison is a native of Houston, Texas and has been a Dallas resident for 15 years. She is a graduate of Dallas Baptist University.